

Greetings from Prague!

The iSGTW team is in Prague this week for the 2012 EGI Technical Forum. Make sure you don't miss a thing by following our live tweets from the event.

The

Posted on SEP 19
2012 5:01AM

Share this story

↻ Republish

Tags

cloud distributed comuting

EGI

EGI Technical Forum

GLOBUS

Grid computing

Prague

Do you speak e-Science. Image courtesy André-Pierre Oliver.

iSGTW team is in Prague this week for the EGI Technical Forum 2012.

Follow us on Twitter @iSGTW to be kept up to date with all the program highlights. The hashtag for the event is #egitf12.

Also, make sure you check back next week for our full round up of the event in our 26 September issue. Of course, if you can't possibly wait that long, you can check out our blogs over on the EGI website and the Gridcast website.

Finally, you can see photos from the EGI Technical Forum on Flickr under the tag 'egitf12'.

- Andrew Purcell

Join the conversation

Contribute

Do you have story ideas or something to contribute? Let us know!

OUR UNDERWRITERS

Thank to you our underwriters, who have supported us since the transition from International Science Grid This Week (iSGTW) into Science Node in 2015. We are incredibly grateful.

View all underwriters

CATEGORIES

Advanced computing
Research networks
Big data
Tech trends
Community building

CONTACT

Science Node

Email:

editors@sciencenode.org

Website:

sciencenode.org

Disclaimer: While Science Node™ does its best to provide complete and up-to-date information, it does not warrant that the information is error-free and disclaims all liability with respect to results from the use of the information.